At the risk of getting a bit wordy, how about: "any load or wasteload allocation for stormwater runoff from developed lands"?

David and Julie

When I originally read it, I interpreted the language as potentially applying to point sources—i.e. wastewater treatments plants.

Could you instead say "wasteload allocation for stormwater runoff from developed lands"?

A broader alternative could be "wasteload allocation for nonpoint sources"

While the words have a little "inside baseball" feel - this was intended to simply link the trigger directly to the portion of the TMDL that the permit requirement would address. I think making this connection is important, but don't want it to derail the larger conversation.

Thanks!

why developed lands? Could that leave Ag lands out? I would be more comfortable with nitrogen loading from land based activities.

If this is unfounded then let's go for it and introduce it.

Thanks, Mike!

I would proposed two minor modification to the language, Sec. 1. 10 V.S.A. § 1264(g)(3)(B), for your and Rep. Deen's consideration shown in highlight in the attached. In particular, by leaving the date in (i) at 2023, it avoids the need to revisit the accountability framework with EPA.

Please let me know if this raises any concerns for you.

Secretary Moore

Attached is a redraft of the three-acre impervious surface bill with changes you discussed with Rep. Deen yesterday.

Rep. Deen stated that if you are OK with the changes to the draft, the Agency can send the draft to Matt at the Vermont Realtors.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Rebecca

Sec. Moore gave Rep. Deen requested changes yesterday. I have not yet made those changes. I should make them in the next hour or so. They are fairly substantive so I would not do anything with the draft you have.

Once I am done with the changes, I will send the new draft to David and ask if it can be released to Matt.

I hope this works for you.

HI Mike,

Matt Musgrave of Vermont Realtors has requested to see a copy of this draft bill. Would Rep. Deen mind if it is shared?

Thanks,

Rebecca
