Vermont Advancement Grant Outcomes

Section E.605(e) of the FY 2017 Appropriations Act (H. 875, Act 172) directed VSAC to study the outcomes of its nondegree grant awards, known as Advancement Grants. Advancement grants are need-based grants awarded to Vermont adult students who are trying to improve their employability, whether by gaining specific job skills through a training program or through higher education. VSAC completed studies in 2016 and 2018, and shared findings with the House and Senate Appropriations, Education, Commerce and Finance Committees. The studies showed strong outcomes for the program. In the fall of 2022, VSAC updated that study by collecting background information on the types of nondegree programs funded, the outcomes of those programs, and the numbers and demographics of the Vermonters served. In addition, we also conducted a survey of nondegree grant recipients to collect information on the impact of this grant program on their employment, salary, ongoing college attendance, as well as other aspects of their life such as housing.

Executive Summary

Today's workforce landscape is changing faster than ever. These changes are only being further accelerated by the COVID-19 crisis as communities face critical skill shortages in healthcare, advanced manufacturing, and other essential services. One way in which states are trying to address these challenges is by developing short-term, high-benefit training and education programs designed to provide students with in-demand skills, flexible pathways, and stackable credentials. Some programs are co-designed with local businesses and industries, making them ideal for growing new skills among a readily available pool of job applicants. These programs can help meet the educational and occupational aspirations of students as well as the workforce development needs of their communities and our state. In other words, they can supply a skilled workforce to drive continuing economic development, particularly in rural areas.

In Vermont, there are many options ranging from 12 community college sites, to regional career and technical centers to private, for-profit education and training providers throughout the state—all of which offer local access to training and education programs. This report supplies some baseline measures of a particular type of program—the two-year associate degree program—focusing on students from the High School Class of 2012 who attended postsecondary institutions that offer two-year degrees, whether in Vermont or elsewhere.<sup>1</sup> Many two-year programs offer a relatively affordable way to obtain skills desired by employers.

The current postsecondary climate highlights opportunities for institutions that offer two-year programs. There is often a counter-cyclical component regarding enrollment and economic recessions, particularly for adult students. Adults tend to enroll at community colleges and one-year programs in times of recession. These programs can offer short-term and/or low-residency programs that provide training to displaced workers as well as traditional-aged students who would prefer to remain closer to their home. However, there are also challenges—particularly when we focus on the young adult student cohort, the group of students who enroll in postsecondary education right after high school, which is the focus of this study. In the Northeast there is a shrinking pool of high school graduates, which impacts all postsecondary institutions in the area.

<sup>1</sup> For this cohort we are unable to include all types of education and training students pursued at this time.

VSAC Legislative Guide

The Vermont Student Assistance Corp. (VSAC) exists to strengthen Vermont's workforce by creating career opportunities through higher education and workforce training. We can provide expert resources on higher education and workforce development, backed by research and analysis to inform your policy work.

Education is the greatest equalizer when it comes to economic opportunity and the fact is the most promising jobs in Vermont require education and training beyond high school. At VSAC, it's our mission to make that education and training accessible and affordable with innovative programs.

In 2021, with generous support from legislators and the Governor, VSAC announced the 802 Opportunity Grant: free tuition at Community College of Vermont (CCV) for Vermonters with a family income of $50,000 or less. In 2022, legislators increased the household income threshold to $75,000. The power of this program is its inclusivity. Vermonters of all ages and backgrounds stand to benefit, including working adults, single parents, recent high school graduates, veterans, new Americans, educators, healthcare workers, and entrepreneurs.

In the 2021-2022 academic year, more than 2,000 Vermonters enrolled using 802 Opportunity — close to 50 percent of CCV's degree-seeking students. Vermonters from all 14 counties attended all 12 of CCV's academic centers.

Thank you again for your service to Vermont and we look forward to working with you in the days and weeks ahead.

Scott Giles, VSAC President & CEO

Our vision is to create opportunities for all Vermont students, but particularly for those of any age who believe that the doors to higher education and training are closed to them.

VSAC Research Informs Post-Secondary Education Legislation

VSAC's Research Department plays a critical role in identifying issues related to higher education and workforce development in Vermont. For 35 years, VSAC's research team has worked to collect and analyze data from state and national sources — including Vermont students themselves — in order to provide Vermont policymakers with deeper insights into the complexities of the postsecondary experience in our state. VSAC's reports help to facilitate informed decision-making around Vermont's education policy and investment of the state's resources.
