

This is the testimony of

WESUCA LANDLADY

I've been in a extreme difficult situation for 3 yrs. I've tryed to get work done for these tenants. They have made my life a nightmare. They've damage and chipped paint on the wood work, over & over. They have children and say they'll sue me for their children if they get lead-paint. They make me call to give them a 48 hr notice. The maintenance man goes over and the tenant ^{said} were having they say come back later. I sent the maintenance man over that day 4 times. On the 4th time I went over and the man of the house yell at me and pick a chip of paint off the floor on his finger + stuck it in my face + mocked me! He said oh what is this a paint chip? With a grin on his face. He wanted to argue + said I'm trying to make a apt to get the work ^{done} when can I come back? He said, "Now I want a written 48 notice. Then I'll give him another app^t and they stand the Maintenance Man again! I have to give him another 48 notice and another + another + this went on all summer. I've lost maintenance people because of their games. They wouldn't let us after a 48 hr notice when they weren't there. After going thru maintenance people it is very difficult to get the work done! I end up looking like a dead beat landlord because it's taken so long to get this work done. I feel that if a tenant has an inhabitable situation that needs direct attention, they should waive their 48 notice, if they stop paying rent until the work is done.

In a lot of these situations, the tenant has damaged the apartment deliberately so they don't have to pay rent. Then you take them to court and they continue the game with the 48 notices. It's not fair, something got to change!!
