Whereas, although arriving at their posts from different academic and career backgrounds, Lisa Atwood and Amy Rex have formed an unbeatable and widely lauded team as innovative co-principals of Harwood Union Middle-High School, and

Whereas, Lisa Atwood graduated from Worcester State College in Massachusetts and Indiana University in Bloomington, focusing on health and physical education; was a professor at Norwich University's Department of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, coaching women's sports and serving as an assistant athletic director; joined the Harwood Union High School faculty in 1988, and in 2006 began her climb up Harwood's administrative leadership ladder, culminating in her 2012 appointment as one of the school's two co-principals, and

Whereas, Amy Rex earned degrees from the Universities of Massachusetts and of Vermont in Eastern European Studies and education; is an alumna of the Snelling Leadership Institute; and has held education positions at Johnson's Laraway School, Lamoille Union Middle School, and Danville's K-12 school, where she served as principal, and

Whereas, Harwood students have commented on their co-principals' commitment to upholding students' voices in the decision-making process, and the Atwood-Rex team pushes its professional colleagues to continue improving in the performance of their duties, and

Whereas, the co-principals' dynamic leadership initiatives have won many commendations and three support grants from the Rowland Foundation, and

Whereas, the tragic deaths of five Harwood students in an automobile accident last fall tested the co-principals in ways they could never have envisioned, and under the most trying of circumstances, they taught the students how to grieve and then to continue forward with their lives, and

Whereas, for all these reasons, Lisa Atwood and Amy Rex were each most deservedly honored as a winner of the 2017 Robert F. Pierce Secondary School Principal of the Year Award, now therefore be it
