(2) according to the 2016 article "Do Limits on Family Assets Affect Participation in, Costs of TANF?" by the Pew Charitable Trusts, raising or eliminating asset limits within the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program (TANF) does not affect the number of monthly applicants to the program;

(3) according to the 2016 article "Low TANF Asset Limits Show No Cost or Caseload Benefits for State Programs" by the Pew Charitable Trusts, states experience a decrease in administrative costs when they raise or eliminate TANF asset tests;

(4) according to a 2014 article entitled "Relationships Between College Savings and Enrollment, Graduation, and Student Loan Debt," by the Center for Social Development, children in families that have few or no assets have lower academic achievement scores, high school graduation rates, college enrollment rates, and college graduation rates than children in families with assets; and

(5) school-designated savings are more effective than basic savings in influencing college outcomes.
