Hi Dan – As I understand, questions relating to glebe lands come up in South Burlington once every 5-10 years. As such, there is no policy and the City processes requests on a case-by-case basis. In the most recent instance last year, the City Council agreed to quit claim the property in exchange for reasonable costs processing the request. I believe those ended up being less than $50, if any at all. The two attachments, a memo and Seven Days article, were very helpful in my research into this question last year.

Subject: Glebe Land

Dear Attorney Bolduc,

I am researching Glebe land. As you may be aware, Helen Head has a bill in the legislature which is being reviewed by the Government Affairs Committee on Friday. I am going to testify re that bill. I was wondering, does South Burlington have a policy on the transfer of Glebe land? Todd Leblanc told me that several instances had come up recently, and advised me to contact you for further information. Any light you could bring to this problem would be helpful.

Thank you.
