Whereas, in 1858, the State commissioned the young Brattleboro sculptor Larkin Mead to create a wooden statue representing agriculture, and

Whereas, the figure he created cradled a sheaf of wheat in her left arm and carried a scroll in her right hand to symbolize a legally governed agrarian society, and it was hoisted atop the dome of the new, third State House, and

Whereas, the statue, though popularly referred to as Ceres, the Roman goddess of plenty, has never been officially so named, and

Whereas, Larkin Mead's creation survived Vermont's brutal winters for 80 years, and in 1938, State House Sergeant at Arms Dwight Dwinell, with the support of two State House janitors, whittled a replacement, and

Whereas, 80 years later, in 2018, when the statue was lowered to the ground in anticipation of a major State House dome restoration, a replacement statue was viewed as a necessity, and

Whereas, Chris Miller, the artistic proprietor of Chris Miller Studio in Calais and who has completed important sculptural commissions, was one of the sculptors chosen for this historic project, and

Whereas, his artistic partner was Jerry Williams of Johnson, who operates the Barre Sculpture Studios, a firm that creates “figurative works for monument retailers, churches and civic organizations” throughout the northeastern states, and

Whereas, as a first step in the artistic process, Jerry Williams created a clay model, based on blurry photos of the original statue and Larkin Mead’s illustrations, and

Whereas, with these photos as a guide, Chris Miller, using resilient mahogany wood and working long days, sculpted a 2,000-pound, 14-and-one-half-foot statue of Agriculture, which it is hoped will last 150 years, and

Whereas, Vermonters were welcomed to watch these artists at work as they created the new statue at their special location at the Vermont Granite Museum, and
