

When does a human life begin? Some people say when the heart starts beating, others when the baby has a developed brain. And more who say only when the child is born. But I believe human life begins at conception. Whether or not you agree with me is irrelevant. The fact of the matter is that this bill legalizes infanticide. What else call you call an abortion at birth? Human life is priceless. Nothing changes that fact. Call it an abortion, call it a clump of cells, but that will never change the fact that those "cells" would have been a living, breathing, beautiful child. That child would have one day grown into an adult. That adult would have had the possibility to change the world. How many Einsteins has the world lost because of a decision by an "individual" to "solve the problem" by ending their child's life. So what causes anyone to think they have the "right" to end another's life. There are many names for a person like that but one perfectly fits the bill, murder.

If you choose to ignore all this and say that ending a child's life at birth is perfectly acceptable, then tell me when it stops. When will it be decided that since murder at birth is acceptable, the why not at six months? And what about a year? What will stop the murder of a toddler as compared to a child still in the mother? A heartbeat? The ability to feel pain? Well if a baby can feel pain at twenty weeks, it can absolutely experience its murder before birth. So I ask again, when does it stop? And who will decide what age it becomes a crime to kill your child? Ronald Reagan once said "I've noticed that everyone who is for abortion has already been born."
