Vermont Alliance for Recovery Residences

VTARR is the Vermont Affiliate to the National Alliance of Recovery Residences (NARR). We are committed to improving access to Recovery Residences through established national standards, a fair and transparent certification process, community engagement, education, technical assistance, research, and advocacy.

The Need

Not long ago a Vermonter could wait days to be able to access medically assisted treatment (MAT), considered a best practice, for opioid dependence. These delays created opportunities for continued use and in some cases death due to overdose. Today, the State of Vermont has a robust hub and spoke system, which provides enhanced access to MAT. Over 8,500 Vermonters are currently in some form of MAT. Thousands of individuals are pursuing recovery through other forms of therapy. Let us also not forget that there are many forms of substance use disorder (SUD). For example, Vermont has the 4th highest rate of alcohol dependence and the highest rate of illicit drug use disorder in the country. Currently there are only recovery beds available for 2% of this population. Arguably, recovery housing is the next critical link to addressing Vermont's overall SUD crisis. Efforts are underway to scale this critical resource and, at the same time, systems and legislation are needed to establish sustainability, ensure quality and combat stigma.
