

Art in State Buildings Program

Vermont Veterans Memorial Cemetery

“Honor”

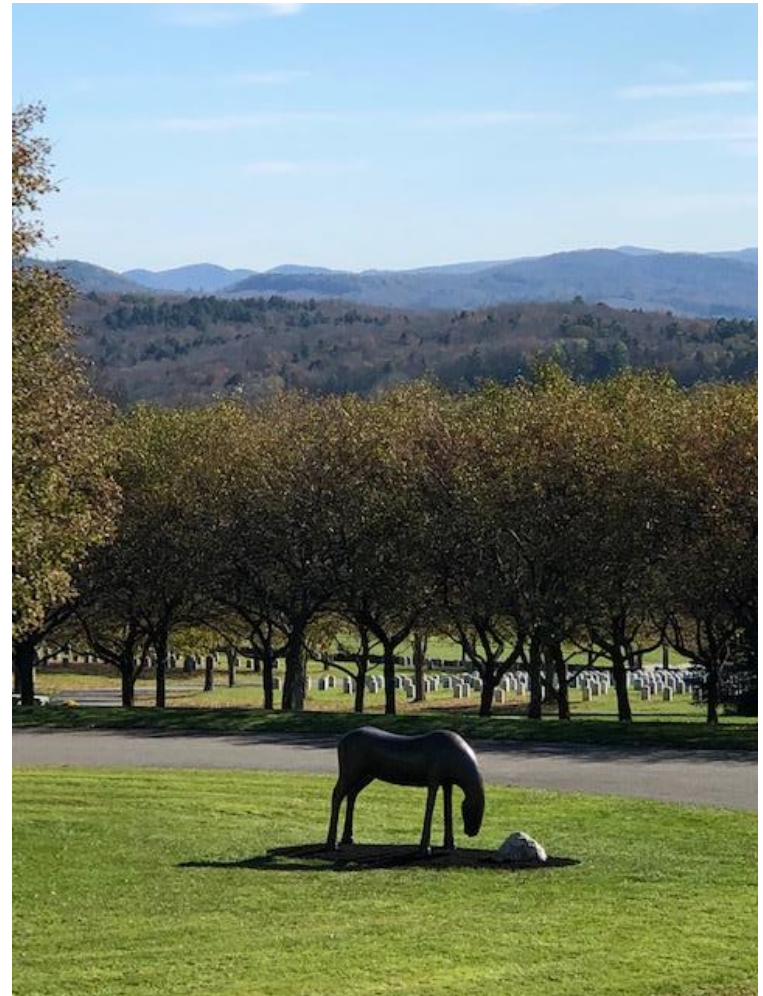

Artist: Karen Petersen

The horse has been an integral part of the military since ancient times.

This sculpture represents a Morgan horse, a breed developed by Justin Morgan who lived with his family in Randolph, bowing its head in honor and remembrance of its lost companion.

Status: Completed October, 2018

Sculpture cast in bronze

Art in State Buildings Program

Projects in Progress

Fish Culture Station, Roxbury

“River Spirit”

Artist: Sean Hunter Williams

The sculpture, will be a representation of a female spawning wild brook trout posed on her side with an open mouth and the head thrust upward as she lays her eggs. It is a testament to the work of the facility as a steward of healthy waterways, and preserving wild trout populations in the future.

Status: Fabrication in process.

Estimated installation in the fall of 2019

Clay model of sculpture to be carved in green granite

Art in State Buildings Program

Projects in Progress

VT Agriculture and Environmental Lab
Randolph Center

“Big Frog”

Artist: Jim Sardonis

The design highlights one of the most important functions of the lab, which is to test waterways for dangerous pollutants. Frogs have smooth, moist skin that is permeable to substances in the water. Adult frogs absorb part of the oxygen and most of the water they need through their skin, making them vulnerable to pollutants. Only the head of the frog is showing, to emphasize the idea that, like the rest of his body, other unknown things may be hidden below the surface.

Model of sculpture to be cast in bronze and located outside the main entrance to the facility

Status: Fabrication in process.
Estimated installation in the spring of 2019