House concurrent resolution congratulating Robert Kilburn of Fair Haven on winning the 2024 Ken Schrader Real Racer of the Year Award

Whereas, in the northern New England motor racing community, the white-haired and bearded, and red and white cap-wearing, Bob Kilburn is affectionately known as Santa Bob Kilburn, and he has developed an adoring fan base populated in good measure with children, and

Whereas, Santa Bob Kilburn was an enthusiastic young motor racing fan, but other than occasional go-kart driving, his motor racing career only started at fifty-seven and a half years of age, and

Whereas, although he started in last place, Santa Bob Kilburn completed the race with his car in one piece, a major personal achievement, and

Whereas, Bear Ridge Speedway, a dirt track in Bradford, was his next venue, and the following year, he honed his driving skills at the then-paved Devil's Bowl Speedway, located just minutes from his Fair Haven home, and

Whereas, the next year, his perseverance at Devil's Bowl resulted in Rookie of the Year honors, and his fellow drivers saluted him with their peer-selected sportsmanship award, and

Whereas, on August 25, 2018, on a return visit to Bear Ridge Speedway, the then 62-year-old Santa Bob Kilburn realized his dream of clinching a race victory, and

Whereas, he and the far-younger drivers enjoy their mutual competition, and Santa Bob Kilburn, who has no biological children, boasts about his hundreds of children, meaning his numerous cheering young fans whom he befriends, and

Whereas, since 2012, the publication Speedway Illustrated has presented the Ken Schrader Real Racer of the Year Award, which recognizes “a special individual who demonstrates the ideal representation of being a ‘Real Racer’,” and in 2024, Santa Bob Kilburn was the deserved honoree, now therefore be it

Offered by All Members of the House

House concurrent resolution in memory of the admired Vermont folk singer and former Elmore Town Moderator Jon Gailmor

Whereas, joyful melodies in celebration of Vermont as "a jewel in the heart of New England" and in praise of the State's values, freedom, strength, and specialness as a place to call home were the hallmarks of the music of Jon Gailmor, the man some referred to as the Pete Seeger of Vermont, and

Whereas, Jon Gailmor studied at the Pennsylvania State University and Temple University, earning a degree in education, and

Whereas, having rejected a possible commercial music career, alternatively, in 1977, Jon Gailmor relocated to Vermont, initially settling in East Montpelier, then moving north to Elmore, and after first focusing on performances at local music clubs, Jon Gailmor recognized that school residencies and musical collaborations with young audiences were his true artistic calling, and

Whereas, Jon Gailmor characterized children as “naturals in making up songs,” and from 1979 to the early 2000s, he shared his love of creating music with them on his Just Kidding radio show, which aired on radio stations WNCS (the Point) in Montpelier and WDEV in Waterbury, and

Whereas, the radio show’s name mirrored the title of his song, which featured the lyrics “Just kidding being a kid,” and similar fun stanzas, and

Whereas, Jon Gailmor became an avid fan of Vermont’s citizen governance process, and in 1994, he even composed a song honoring this tradition, entitled “A Town Meeting Tune,” and

Whereas, his community’s great admiration was tangibly manifested when it elected him Elmore town moderator, charging him with conducting the municipality’s annual and special meetings’ deliberations and overseeing their parliamentary beat and rhythm, a role he enthusiastically exercised for over 15 years until 2024, and

Whereas, in 2022, following the death of his wife, Cathy Murphy, Jon Gailmor joined the Montpelier Gospel Choir, in which she once sang, and in 2024, with a leukemia diagnosis, he moved to his son’s (one of his three children’s) home in New Orleans, Louisiana, where he died at 77 years of age on November 30, 2025, while listening to his song “Gonna Die With A Smile If It Kills Me,” now therefore be it
