

Vermont Land Link Relaunches with Expanded Focus and Direct Land Access Services

The Intervale Center has relaunched Vermont Land Link with a redesigned website to better serve Vermont's agricultural community. As part of the relaunch, VLL has widened its farmland focus to include grazing and forest opportunities to better represent Vermont's stewardship and conservation goals. The free service can help anyone from commercial farmers to forest producers to livestock grazers find land in Vermont.

As a program of the Intervale Center, VLL directly connects users to the Intervale Center's Farm Business Services team that can help to make landowner—farmer matches successful. Our goal is to promote transparency, instill quality back into content and rebuild the VLL community. Creating a trusted space to make connections ultimately accelerates farmland access with the potential to do so more equitably.

Land seekers and landowners are encouraged to create detailed profiles and listings that showcase the unique potential of their properties or specific land-use vision. With improved functionality and features to make communication between VLL members easier and more responsive, listings more informative, and search options more effective, VLL is better than ever. The redesign was made possible through funding from Vermont Working Lands Enterprise Initiative, as well as support and partnership from the New England Farm Link Collaborative.

Quality of land

Most of the crop land is Adams very fine sandy loam, level, and well drained. 1 acre is Buckland clay loam, moisture retaining and mineral rich, with a gentle slope that aids in drainage. The land has been managed using organic method since 1970. We have built this soil up with compost, cover crops, mineral applications, and manure over the years. It is ready to crop. Pasture land is in sloping orchard, good for chickens.

Description of farming experience

Hello, I returned to Vermont several years ago after starting and running a 30 acre vegetable + 200 acre grazing operation in Virginia. I now grow a rotation of grains, dry beans.
