What is resilience?

Resilience is the ability of a community to survive, respond, and adapt to disaster with an orientation towards thriving conditions. We recognize that both acute and everyday disasters are conditions that demand increased community resilience.

- Everyday disasters shape our world—the rising cost of food, climate disruption, political volatility, housing disparities and more
- Built upon a belief that people who are closest to problems are closest to solutions

A devastating flood just struck your community. Neighbors' homes are underwater. Roads are washed out.

You want to help. But what exactly do you do?

A new online manual provides some of the answers.

A spokesperson at Vermont Emergency Management said the toolkit has the state's endorsement.

'This is a good resource for communities and individuals,' said Mark Bosma, the public information officer at VEM. "The more places it lives, the better."

Why are Resilience Hubs a Strategic Investment for the State of Vermont?

What are the problems we see?

- Affordability & prosperity rely on us unlocking the power of our people and community-led solutions - What do we have when we don't have enough money?
- Vermont needs more people power: families, workers, participation in public processes.
- Disconnect between public institutions and the people they are supposed to serve.
- Silos and false objectives prevent us from working together to understand the real problems and create innovative solutions.
- Compounding crises are threatening our communities materially and psychologically.
- Those who are most vulnerable are hit hardest by all crises.
- The lack of effective solutions is inefficient, expensive & demoralizing.

ROI: a modest State investment leverages underutilized community resources → a bedrock of community resilience

- Activates and expands civic leadership → More hands on deck
- Connects a hub of community strengths and assets → More than the sum of our parts
- Puts communities in charge of their priorities → Better informed investments
- Grows trust between government and communities → More efficient government actions
- Builds where we have momentum - the Resilience Hub Toolkit and the LAOB are tools that are working → Snowball effect
